County Seeking Input from Residents on Communications

The County of Grande Prairie is currently looking at ways to better communicate with County residents and businesses and as is seeking input from interested residents through an electronic survey.

“As part of our ongoing process of looking to improve the way we communicate with our residents and local businesses we believe it is important to hear directly from those residents and business operators,” said County of Grande Prairie CAO Bill Rogan.

“We therefore are encouraging everyone to take the time to complete a brief survey to obtain ideas and suggestions about the information that is most important for our residents to receive from the County and the best ways to get that information to them.”

The survey is located on the County’s internet website at www.countygp.ab.ca or by going directly to the website <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/HCY7R2P>. The survey will be open until July 30th for resident and business input. Additional opportunity for resident input, especially for those residents not having computer access to the survey, will be made available later in the summer and early fall.

“The County of Grande Prairie continually strives to be open and accountable to County residents, and good communications is the foundation of accountability,” stated Rogan. “This survey will help ensure that County communications meets the needs and priorities of our residents.”
